ICAR-INDIAN VETERINARY RESEARCH INSTITUTE, IZATNAGAR

The Indian Veterinary Research Institute (IVRI), established in 1889 as the Imperial Bacteriological Laboratory in Pune, is one of India's oldest research institutions under ICAR. Now headquartered at Izatnagar, Uttar Pradesh, it has completed 135 years of significant contributions to Veterinary Science. This ISO 9001:2015 certified Institute conducts basic and strategic research to enhance animal health and productivity, as well as to improve farmers' livelihoods through technology dissemination. IVRI started providing quality education and training in 1900 and currently offers 39 UG and PG programs, along with 90 certificate and diploma courses. The institute has played a significant role in the eradication of several dreaded animal diseases, including Dourine, Rinderpest, CBPP and African Horse Sickness. IVRI has developed vaccines for numerous livestock and poultry diseases through extensive research and is now advancing the development of combined and next-generation marker vaccines using modern technologies. In addition, several diagnostics for early disease detection, therapeutics and nutrition-based technologies to improve animal health and productivity have been developed. The Institute has also developed 02 livestock breeds, nutritious animal-source food products and granted 107 Patents, Designs, and Copyrights.

DIVISION OF LIVESTOCK PRODUCTS TECHNOLOGY

Realizing the importance of hygienic production, processing and quality control of meat, milk, eggs and other animal products, Division of Livestock Products Technology was started at this premier Research Institute in 1975. The Division has made remarkable contributions in R&D and human resource development during its glorious 50 years of dedicated service to the Nation. Initially started under All India Coordinated Research Project (AICRP) on utilization of slaughterhouse by-products in 1974, active operations began in March 1975 in old Poultry Research Building, and activities related to milk collection, processing and disposal also commenced that year. Division has come up to its present status by the sincere and untiring efforts and dedication of its members. Since its inception, it has trained 126 MVSc and 80 PhD scholars—most of them are now serving in various ICAR Institutes, SAUs, SVUs and State Governments in various capacities such as Dean, Director, Joint Director and other important positions. Through R&D focused on various aspects of meat production, processing, packaging, safety and quality assurance and by-products utilization, Division has developed a number of technologies, many of which have been successfully transferred to the entrepreneurs.

INDIAN MEAT SCIENCE ASSOCIATION, HYDERABAD

The Indian Meat Science Association (IMSA), headquartered at ICAR-National Meat Research Institute, Hyderabad is India's premier scientific consortium advancing meat science and technology through multidisciplinary research and innovation. Comprising meat scientists, processors, academicians and industry experts. IMSA drives cutting-edge research in sustainable meat production systems, advanced preservation technologies, meat biochemistry, food safety interventions, and value-added products development. The Association facilitates knowledge exchange through its peer-reviewed "Journal of Meat Science", Annual Conferences, and specialized workshops while bridging the gap between research and industry application by providing a common platform. IMSA also serves as a technical advisor to regulatory bodies like FSSAI, BIS and APEDA. By fostering collaborations across academia, research institutions and the meat industry, IMSA promotes technological advancements that enhance meat quality, safety and sustainability.
